An Incident from Life Helated by a Secret-Service Delective One of the most successful counter-

Lockwith the bows nabbed and placed behind the bars for a long time was a former emplaye of the burean of engraving and printing named Charles Atsell. While still an employe of the Imreau he married a girl named Willams, of Providence, R. I. She had een brought up to regard herself us an he'ress, educated abroad and was one of the prondest young hales in the land. cember of that year she married Atsell. The match, I believe, grew out of some romant's incident. People who knew her best doubted if she had any love in her heart. Her pride did not go with her money. Notwithstanding a underate salary, she came to Washington with her nose high in the air, and her arrogant manner and style of dress was generally remarked. It was, indeed, her extravagance which led her husband into erime. luto crlme.

After the last uffair he resigned his position, and, as was afterward learned, ullied inid, as was afferward fearned, allied himself with a gang of counterfeiters who had their headquarters. In New York. Two or three treasury notes were put out by them which e realisted extensively, and for months the whole secret-service force was working in vain to turn up the criminals. At all was not suspected of being a counterfeiter. He left Washington for New York, and through the influences of York, and through the luthences of relatives, it was sa'd, secured certain profitable army contracts. He could have been found any day had we wanted

Along in June, 1864, having at length satisfied ourselves that the gang was located in New York, the circle began to narrow dawn. One night a strunger from Missouri was arrested in a drawk en condition, and on his person were found two or three letters implicating him as a shover of the queer and fur-n'shing straight clews to work the gang. Aided by local detectives, we raided a residence on Twenty-second street and eaptured Atsell, a man named Collin, a shaver named Green, and the entire out-tit of press, tools and patter.

We made the rait about three a'clock in the afternoon, and Mrs. Assell was driving in Central Park. I was left to awa'ther return and take her into ensawa ther return and take her into ensoly. She returned about two o'clock, dressed in richest attire and as arrogant as a queen. I broke the news as gently as possible, but she was not a hit agitated. "Very well, sir. You will allow me to change my attire?"

"Certainly."

So, for the better part of two years, the old shoemaker of Augsburg has lived in Brooklyn, and in spite of the fact that he has not "stuck to h's last." he has been contented. Novertheless, he often thought about Augsburg, and about his pet bullineh, wendering whether the linch had found an owner in the person of some l'rince, "for that b'rd was lit to whistle before a King," one day, just provious to the past Christmas, the old German saw a gray spulrrel in a cage in a window of a bird store in New York, and stopped to watch its anties. As he stood there he heard the whistle of a buildingh, and so he stepped quickly in. In a large cago near the door were a dozen linches, and when the sheemaker approached the eage one of the linches sidled along his perch toward him and whistled softly. perch toward him and whistled softly. The old man of Augsburg was already bent of boly, but he oxcitodly bent still lower, so that the linch could whistle in his car, and that the pleused bird did, with much gleeful sweetnesss. The shoemsker was more than delighted, he was overjoyed; for ludeed the tinch was his old-time pet, the line whistler that his wife had taught in the little shop of Augsburg.

The Hubbard gown proper is ne more. We associate it with a balloon that had a number of tucks upon its roundity by way of decoration, and an entire absence of the dignity and elegance which characterize later improvements of that primitive style. True it is, that many fashionable gowns have no drapery, and fall in straight lines from the waist to feet, but as a rule, the naterials used for these are of rich and handsome quality. This gives substance to tho skirt; what is arranged in kilts or otherwise, is left to fall in natural folds. The foundation skirt, nullke that of a Hubbard, which had none, is gored and drawn in by tapes to produce a narrow skirt for the kilts to rest upon, and at the extreme back it is necessary to put into the band every inch of material that it is possible to adjust, in order to give the oxtremely full effect that is now so fashionable.

and Itabble Stone Walls. The lirst idea that naturally suggests tself, after the general plan of arrangement has been perfected, is what material shall mainly enter luto the construction of a building, brick, stone or wood. In nearly every portion of the Eastern, Middle and Western States. these three building materials can roadily be had, and the cost of production does not vary much in any locality. Assuming, therefore, that the first cost is the same in the above localities, we may easily arrive at the ultimate cost of construction. For the purpose of this article we may assume the cost of good common brick, during the summer to be $8.00 per thousand; cest of labor and mertar to lay the same in the wall, $4.00 per thousand, wall measure. The cost of good quarry stone, assumed at $10 per cord; the cost of labor and mortar to lay the cost of labor and mortar to lay the same in the wall, $8 per cord of one hundred feet. The cost of framing lumber $12.00 per thensand feet; labor and nails to put the same up $6.00 per thousand. With these prices as a basis it is a matter of computation only to arrive at the proportionate cost of each material after it has been worked into the walls. As an example, suppose we have ten feet square of plain wall to build, what will be the comparative cost? Ten fee square equals one handrol superficin feet. If to be built of brick twelve inches thick, estimating 221 brick to the superficial foot, would take 2,250 brick; cost in wall per thousand $12.00, equals $27.00. To lay a good rubble stone wall, it should be 18 luches thick; therefore, 10 feet square, or 100 superfield feet of stone wall 18 inches thick, at $18 per cord of 100 feet, would cost $27.00. In estimating a frame or studded wall there should be included first, the studding, say, 2x8, 12 inch centers; second the outside sheathing of 1 inch sur faced hoards; third, the siding of clear plne. For this example we have placed the cost of rough lumber at $18.00 thousand, put up. We will assume the cast of the Inch surfaced boards for sheathing to be $25.00 per thousand, including labor, u.ils, and material. Siding at $10,00 per thousand, including lumber, labor, nails and wasto. Ten feet square, or 100 superficial feet of 288 studding at $18.00 per cial feet, of 2x8 studding, at $18.00 per thousand, equals $2.43. The same sur-face, covered with surfaced boards at sace, covered with surfaced boards at $25.00 per thousand, costs $2.50; 125 superficial feet of siding, at $40.00 per thousand, equals $5.00, allowing one-quarter for lap and waste. Thus we lind the total cost of the frame wall to be $9.93. Add to this the cost of painting the same concerns at $3.00 per supers at $3.00 per s ing the same, one square, at $3.00, wifind the cost to be $12.93. Compara tively, therefore, we flud the cost of one hundred superficial feet of wall built of the three leading building materials of the country as follows:

The cost of window and door frames. cornices, etc., may be estimated about the same in cither building. In brick and stone buildings we find the addi-tional cost of cut stone window and door sills, water table, etc., but the cost of these adjuncts does not enter into the tree tranks and rocks of the dense shadowy heart of forest glens.—N. Y. that may be dispensed with U necessary.—National Builder. HE WAS BOSS.
